1951 Barbara Dowd Wright sends an update. In 2010, she published her first novel, An Awakening Heart: A Novel of the Moravians in Early America (Moon Trail Books). Barbara drew on archival evidence and research on Moravians to bring to life her ancestor, Christina Krause, a protagonist in the story of two Moravian women who, with their husbands and small children, make the passage from their native Germany to North America in the 18th-century. Barbara adds: “I have lived in New Jersey for many years, where I practiced psychotherapy. I obtained my PhD in psychology and religion from Drew University. I have lectured on the Moravians in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and North Carolina.” Barbara is also the author of the 2005 book Jewish Renewal in America: 22 Stories of Transformation, Spirit, and Community (iUniverse).

1952 Chesley Kahmann writes that she’s released two new CDs in her Kahmann Touch series: Collision, a collection of 14 songs sung by the Interludes; Chesley’s longtime singing group; and Love Scenes, a collection of 13 songs sung by Jennifer McBride, with Chesley’s son, Ames Parsons, on trumpet, and Chesley on piano. Both CDs are produced by Orbiting Clef Productions.

Role Reversal: Ram, once mentored by Messinger, hosts Messinger on a tour of the ancient Shore Temple, in Mahabalipuram, India, near Ram’s hometown of Chennai.

Across Seas, Across Generations

In January, Marty Messinger ’49 traveled to the southern Indian province of Tamil Nadu. His host on the journey was Navin Ram ’95. Marty, a life trustee of the University, is managing director of the investment firm Neuberger Berman. Navin is the CEO of OriginWave, an information technology company based in Chennai that serves financial services clients in the U.S., Europe, and Asia.

The two met when Navin was a student. “One day I got this call in my office,” says Marty. “He said, ‘I’m on the debate team and I noticed you endowed the team,’” Marty recalls. “He’d worked his way to Rochester from India, and he asked if I’d mentor him.”

Marty did, the two kept in touch, and this past Meliora Weekend, Marty agreed to visit Navin in India.

Navin’s daily Blackberry messages to Marty’s family—Marty and his late wife, Joan, had four daughters and 10 grandchildren together—served as a journal of the trip, recording Marty’s arrival in the port city of Chennai in “flip-flops, sunglasses, sun cream, and hat,” barefoot walks through the temples of Kanchipuram; samplings of southern Indian cuisine (as well as a visit to KFC to fulfill a craving); visits to rural farming communities; a tour of a Brahmin village and house; and visits to several thriving arts communities.

Of their tour of Old Chennai, Navin wrote: “We started off at a beautiful Armenian church downtown. They were the first to come to Chennai along with the British, Portuguese, and Dutch. Marty walked through the streets, checking out vegetable vendors, asking lots of questions, dodging the cows, and breathing in the spices. He then got on a rickshaw and became the maharaja of the group as we toured the streets.”

“Chennai is undergoing incredible transformation and it’s a great cultural center,” says Marty. “It was a wonderful time.”

Singh sends an update. He writes: “This past year I started as an assistant professor of international and public affairs at Columbia University, and took the position of director of systems design at the Earth Institute. I teach in the spring, and many of the other months I’m a half-time resident in internal medicine at Mt. Sinai Hospital. It’s been a challenging year of learning medicine, teaching class, writing and doing research, traveling to many countries, and building the Earth Institute’s capacity for technical innovation in economic development and governance. But it’s great, and my wife, Manmeet Kaur, is incredibly supportive. She’s finishing an MBA at Columbia Business School and starting a social enterprise for community health in East Harlem called ‘City Health Works!’ Yes, we see each other, and we’re having a boy in August!” Prabhjot adds that he’d love to hear from classmates at psingh@ei.columbia.edu.

2004 Ryan Aylward (see ’06). Yasmin Hilal and Eli Cabanas were married in January. Pictured behind Yasmin and Eli are Jonathan Mahoney ’03, Amy O’Byrne Mahoney, Matthew Dusel, Rachel LaManna, Brad Mervis ’03, Scott Morganstein ’03, Anthony Siniscal, Abby Warner, Merissa Dzau, Carissa Cama, and Kelly Trendell.

2006 Daniel Etlinger writes that he’s engaged to Tabitha Fish. They live in Tampa, Fla., with their two puppies, Fluffternutter and Scampers. Daniel adds: “We enjoy Florida’s beaches, athletics, and braving the outdoors. Tabitha is an attorney at Sacon Gilmore Carraway & Gibbons and I’m an attorney for Perry Law. I’m also pleased to announce my recent victory over fellow Theta Chi member Jared Halperin in a classic Pong game.” … David Ladon ’07 (T5) writes that he, Jon Dashkoff ’07 (T5) and Ryan Aylward ’04—all members of the five-person band The Doctors Fox—have released their second CD, Handful of Laughs (The Doctors Fox). David, who composed the songs, plays bass, mandolin, and sings lead vocals; Jon plays guitar; and Ryan plays violin.

Also in attendance were Alissa Tully, Marc Karasek ’09, Alex Langley, and Will Archambault ’09, ’10 (MS). … Greg Howard has joined the New England law firm of Donovan & O’Connor as an associate. He’ll work in the firm’s North Adams, Mass., office. … Natalie Lupiani sends an update. She writes: “In February, as I rode the subway to work in Manhattan and read the New York Times Magazine article ‘The War Ends Here: Fighting to the Finish in Afghanistan’s Most Dangerous Place,’ a name jumped out at me: Nikolaos de Maria ’09. Nik is now a lieutenant in the Marines, commanding a platoon in Afghanistan. I was startled to see his name in that context, although I knew he had been deployed to Afghanistan. Because I know how many people will be just as proud as I was while reading the article, I wanted to share the piece, which appeared in the Feb. 5, 2012, issue of the magazine.”

1965 Jim (Rush) Rees (MS) (see ‘57 undergraduate).

1966 Mary Switzer Rees (MA) (see ‘57 undergraduate). . . Charles Sanders (PhD) has published a book, Did Jesus Believe in Genesis? (Holy Fire Publishing). He writes: “Mixing a long career in nuclear engineering with Christian apologetics, I argue that the theological modifications required for the acceptance of the biased assumptions of evolution and the big bang are utterly disastrous for biblical Christianity.”

1967 John Webster (PhD), a professor emeritus in the University of Wisconsin–Madison’s college of engineering, sends an update. In May 2011, he and his wife, Nancy, “spent a week in Dublin at the same time Queen Elizabeth and President Obama visited. Until September, Nancy was busy volunteering with community, museum, and University League groups. She had an implantable cardioverter defibrillator installed because of rhythm problems and is recovering from that. I continue teaching biomedical instrumentation and design and am involved with various research projects. Four faculty from Vietnam spent a month here with me to study our methods of teaching. In December, I spent three weeks in Saudi Arabia, demonstrating our methods of teaching.” John and Nancy have four grown children as well as several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

1969 John Barry (MA), an author and historian, has written a book, Roger Williams and the Creation of the American Soul (Viking Press).

1973 Michael Millard (PhD), a former financial advisor at Merrill Lynch who teaches in the English department at the State University of New York at Geneseo, has written a book, Tariel’s Way: A Spiritual Adventure (Huston Road Press). Set in western Asia in the 12th century, it’s the story of an elderly man named Tariel to whom young people turn for advice.

1976 Leonard Jason (PhD), professor of psychology at DePaul University, and David Glenwick (PhD), professor of psychology at Fordham University, have coedited Methodological Approaches to Community-Based Research (APA Books). In addition, Leonard has coedited Recovery from Addictions in Communal Living Settings: The Oxford House Model (Routledge).

Eastman School of Music

1959 Katherine Hoover sends an update. She writes: “In February, I spent several days giving classes at the University of Wisconsin at Whitewater, ending with a concert of my works by faculty, alumni, and students, and rewarded with a standing ovation. A trip to Spain followed, with performances of my works in Barcelona and Cordoba. I enjoyed the teaching, the company, the food, the sights, and my first time on a motorcycle.” Katherine adds that in April, bassoonist Peter Kolkay ’00E (MM) and pianist Alexandra Nguyen ’03E (DMA) performed her composition Journey at New York City’s Merkin Hall.

1961 In March, Madeleine Mitchell (MM), violinist and director of the London Chamber Ensemble, made a tour and taught master classes at several string departments run by fellow Eastman alumni, including Cora Cooper ’82E (MM) of Kansas State University, Julian Ross ’82E (MM) of Baldwin-Wallace College, and Peter Slowik (MM) and Jim Howsmon ’78E (MM) of Oberlin. . . . Mary Natvig ’91E (PhD) is the coauthor of Music: A Social Experience (Pearson/Prentice Hall). Topics explored in the book include music and ethnicity, gender, spirituality, love, and politics.

1982 Evan Rothstein writes: “I was named deputy head of strings of the Guildhall School of Music and Drama in the fall of 2011, and now divide my time between London and Paris, where I still teach a masters seminar at the University of Paris 8 on music and politics in the United States. I’ve been the chairman of the European Chamber Music Teachers’ Association since 2009 and have been teaching chamber music at the Indiana University Summer String Academy every year since 1997.”

1986 Roger Nye (see ’79).

1990 Violist Peter Sulski writes: “I recently returned from directing my seventh Al Kamandjati Baroque Festival in the Middle East, with performances in Ramallah, Jerusalem, Bethlehem, and Gaza City. While in Gaza City, I ran into Marc Thayer ’93E, ’95E (MM), who was spending time with some of his musically talented Gazan friends. My recent projects include guest teaching for Patricia McCarty at the Boston Conservatory, artistic director of the Worcester Chamber Music Society, and a solo series featuring the complete solo string works of Bach at Clark University.”

1991 Brent Edstrom (MM) has written a book, Recording on a Budget: How to Make Great Audio Recordings Without Breaking the Bank (Oxford University Press). Brent is a jazz pianist, composer, and arranger in Spokane, Wash.

1992 James Cochran (DMA) was one of six winners of the Naples, Fla., United Arts Council’s 2012 Stars in the Arts awards. James is founder and director of the Naples Philharmonic Center Chorale, resident organist for the Naples Philharmonic Center for the Arts, director of the Philharmonic Youth Chorale, director of music at Vanderbilt Presbyterian Church in Naples, and organizer of the annual Naples Organ Festival.
1993  Marc Thayer ’95E (MM) (see ’90).

1994  Matthew Brady sends an update. He writes: “For the last 18 years, I’ve been conducting, teaching, and concertizing in New York City. I’ve performed as a pianist in concerts at Carnegie Hall, Zankel Hall, the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Cooper Union, and the 92nd Street Y, and made my recital debut at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C., in 1998. For 15 years, I served as associate conductor and principal pianist for the Brooklyn Youth Chorus, which received a Grammy award during my tenure. From 2003 to 2010, I was the director of choral activities at the Berkeley Carroll School, and for eight years, I was a piano faculty member at the 92nd Street Y School of Music. Since 2003, I’ve been the conductor and director of the precollege choral program at the Mannes College of Music. I’ve recently accepted a job as choral director at the Brearley School in New York City, where I’ll conduct two choirs and coach chamber music.”

1996  Saxophonist Ted Belledin performs on Northern Lights: Choral Works by Ola Gjeilo (Chandos), a recording by the Grammy Award–winning ensemble, Phoenix Chorale. Ted performs widely in Arizona with multiple bands including the Shining Star Band, Dennis Rowland’s Jazz Experience, and the world music group Azz Izz.

1999  Melody Fader, an interdisciplinary collaborative artist and pianist, has released a CD, Music of Frédéric Chopin (Centaur Records).

2000  Peter Kolkay (MM) (see ’99).

2003  Alexandra Nguyen (DMA) (see ’99).

2004  Hannah Lash has composed Requiem Pro Avibus Mortuis (Requiem for Extinct Birds), which premiered in April at the 2012 Earth Day Concert at Park Avenue Christian Church in Manhattan as part of the church’s Arts at the Park program. Hannah’s work has also been performed at the Chicago Art Institute, Tanglewood Music Center, and other venues and has been commissioned by a wide range of foundations, including the Howard Hanson Foundation.

2005  Sarah Chan (DMA) writes that she’ll be performing Mozart’s Piano Concerto No. 23 in A Major, K. 488, with New York Concert Artists Symphony Orchestra in New York City on May 26th. Sarah is an assistant professor of music and director of keyboard studies and music theory at Northwestern Oklahoma State University. This year she also will serve as an adjudicator for the American Prize competition.

2010  Lisa Marie Raposa (DMA) of Tiverton, R.I., and Gregory Scott Millar (DMA) of Lachine, Québec, send a note and photo: They were married in May at Independence Harbor in Assonet, Mass., surrounded by family and friends. Lisa and Greg met at Eastman in 2007 while they were students in the piano accompanying and chamber music program. They are codirectors of the new piano lessons program at St. Mark’s Church in Dorval, Québec, and perform together as the Raposa & Millar Piano Duo (www.raposamillar.com). They live in Montréal.

2012  Sarah Chan (DMA) writes that she’ll be performing Mozart’s Piano Concerto No. 23 in A Major, K. 488, with New York Concert Artists Symphony Orchestra in New York City on May 26th. Sarah is an assistant professor of music and director of keyboard studies and music theory at Northwestern Oklahoma State University. Lynn Gordon: ‘A Clearer and Deeper Understanding’

“I know so well what I want of life: I want to understand all manner of things better. I should like to contribute to a clearer and deeper understanding of the things I understand. What I need: More knowledge. What I prize: Human relationships, of all kinds, passionate, tender, intellectual, understanding. What I want: A home which will be a center of life & illumination for people who can really contribute to the development of the humanities. My gifts: Interpretive; power to draw out & record others. My interests: All humanities. Politics; literature insofar as it is not precious but deals with living ideas; economics; all the attributes of civilized living—cooking, home furnishing—manners.”

Lynn Gordon, our beloved friend and colleague, quoted this passage from the diary of Dorothy Thompson, the pioneering journalist who was the subject of a biography Lynn had nearly completed at the time of her death. When we read that passage, we are reading about Lynn herself. Knowledge, understanding, a welcoming home, stimulating conversation, good food, warmth, intelligence, kindness: these were the things that she created in her life, for all who knew her.

She joined the faculty of the Warner School of Education in 1983, becoming also a member of the College’s Department of History in 1989. By the time she retired in 2011, she had left her mark on two branches of the University, and she had taught students in a range of subjects, from the higher education of women to the European cauldron of the interwar years to the history of Judaism to the crises in the Middle East.

A professor emerita of history and a scholar of gender, education, ethnicity, and diplomacy, Lynn died Feb. 9. She was 65.

She wanted passionately to contribute to our own “clearer and deeper understanding” of the things she had learned, through her lifelong quest to learn more. Those who had the privilege of studying or teaching with her will always remember her calm helpfulness in the face of our confusion.

I taught three courses with her—on the historiography of the Holocaust, on nationalism and ethnic conflict, and on modern Jewish history. We traveled together to Poland and Germany to prepare for this series of seminars and talked endlessly about the difficulty of conveying to our students—or understanding ourselves—both the sense and the irrationality of these sorrow-laden, infinitely complicated histories.

Lynn had a way of taking the measure of our muddled thoughts and, as though they were a pile of rumpled clothes stuffed into a suitcase, she would open the suitcase, take out the clothes, shake them, smooth out the wrinkles, fold them up properly, repack the suitcase, and allow us to carry on with a well-ordered mind.

Through her clarity of mind, sharpness of judgment, and patient generosity, we came to understand the world better.

In the words of George Santayana’s “In Memoriam”: “With you a part of me hath passed away... And I scarce know which part may greater be,—what I keep of you or you rob from me.” —Celia Applegate

WIDE-RANGING: Gordon made a mark in the College and at the Warner School.

Applegate is a professor of history at Rochester.

TRIBUTE

Paul LaCelle: ‘Contribute or Make Trouble’

When Paul LaCelle first recruited me to Rochester, he provided me with far more support than a lowly postdoc had any right to expect. Then he insisted that I publish independently of him, sacrificing his own career in favor of mine. This sort of thing happened over and over again, not just in my own experience, but for many others. A Medical Center faculty member for more than 40 years, Paul was always more interested in helping someone else succeed than in seeking accolades for himself. He died March 9 at age 82.

Paul was enormously talented intellectually, but so humble that you hardly knew it. One of the early pioneers in trying to understand the role of blood cell deformability in clinical pathology, he was interested not just in the biophysical properties of the cells, although he was a great fan of physics and physicists in general. Rather, he focused on the role that mechanics played in the pathophysiology of diseases related to red cell and white cell abnormalities, and how these abnormalities got in the way of blood flow and oxygen delivery.

In the latter part of his career, his main focus was administration, and he led the Department of Biophysics through a number of difficult but important transitions through the 1980s and 1990s. Later he contributed to the University as associate dean for graduate education in the medical school, a role where he had the opportunity to indulge his passion for fostering and promoting the careers of young scientists.

Paul had a great laconic wit. On one occasion (it must have been a particularly bad day in the chairman’s office) he advised me, “If you ever think about becoming a chairman, you should take three months off and get some therapy.” Even in the last stages of his illness, reflecting on careers, he commented, “It’s good to either contribute or make trouble.”

His passion for excellence and the attention and care he gave to those around him made him a truly exceptional individual, one who contributed a great deal to the University and to the community at large.

I owe him a great debt personally, and we all miss him dearly. —Richard Waugh

Waugh is professor and chair of biomedical engineering; professor of biochemistry and biophysics; and professor of pharmacology and physiology.
