ARTS, SCIENCES & ENGINEERING

1948 Jack Fassett sends an update. He's chronicled his life, which included a clerkship to Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed (1938–57) during the time of the Brown v. Board of Education decision, and the life of his wife of 61 years, Betty, in two books: The Shaping Years (Xlibris, 2000) and Betty: Chronicle of a Moving Life (Chapel Hill Press, 2008). He writes: "Betty is a chronicle of the exceptional 20th-century life of a small-town girl. As a young Army nurse during World War II, Betty participated in some of the defining events of the century. Upon returning from the war and while attending college, she met and married another veteran. Thereafter, she employed her nursing skills in a variety of positions supporting him through law school and while they became settled and raised their family. As a consequence of Jack's evolving career path, Betty found herself sharing her husband's involvement in three of the most challenging issues of the second half of the century (as well as of today): racial discrimination, as Jack clerked at the Supreme Court during the term when the school desegregation decision was rendered; gender discrimination, which came to the fore when Jack became a utility executive; and the several issues, including those related to nuclear power, which arose during the energy crises of the 1970s and 1980s while Jack served as a leader of the electric utility industry in New England. During the early years of their retirement that followed, Betty was able to revisit some of the areas of her wartime service and also to travel to many other parts of the world. Betty's dire medical problems curtailed all such activities during the last decade, but she and Jack recently celebrated the 61st anniversary of their never-dull marriage."

1952 Norman Neureiter has been awarded the Austrian Cross of Honour for Science and Art. The award, bestowed by the Austrian government, recognized Norman for his work with the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis, founded in 1972 to bring scientists across the Cold War divide together to address global problems. The institute, which today includes member nations from five continents, is located near Vienna. Norman is the acting director of the American Association for the Advancement of Science's Center for Science, Technology, and Security Policy.

1960 Howard Silbersher sends an update. He practiced family dentistry in New York City and Bucks County, Pa., for more than 45 years, before selling his Bucks County practice in 2009. He remains active, teaching one day a week to dental residents at Beth Israel Hospital in Newark, N.J. In addition, he recently took two residents with him to Knoxville, Tenn., on a volunteer project with the nonprofit Remote Area Medical. They joined 40 other dentists who delivered free care to 800 patients. "It was, for all, a spiritually uplifting experience. The students who went with me learned a lot." Howard adds that he'd love to hear from classmates at MChester3@verizon.net.

1961 John and Mary Hannan Greppin send an update. John writes: "We recently took a sleeper train from Toronto, leaving at 9:30 a.m., to Halifax, Nova Scotia, where we arrived at 5:30 p.m. the next evening, and visited our classmate, Bill Miller, and his wife, Gareth. Bill lives in a house on a cove of the Atlantic Ocean, and the gustatorial high point was a dinner of many huge lobsters available from a lobsterman just down the street at $5.50 a pound. Bill runs a craft store, John is retired as a linguist from Cleveland State University, and Mary is still a highly charged bird watcher.”

1963 Dick Steele (see '64).

1964 Richard Cavagnol has written Nimroz Provincial Handbook: A Guide to the People and the Province (IDS International). It's a guide for civilian and military personnel in Afghanistan, as well as other interested people, covering topics such as tribes, language, culture, history, government, and the economy. Richard spent nine months in Delaram District, Nimroz Province, as a USAID field program officer. . . . Tom Collins writes: “Members of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity have held a ski week at Snowmass, Colo., for the past 20 years.” At the 2013 gathering were (from left to right) John DeTraglia, John Ozols '65, '68 (MS), Jerald Zandman, and Tom. Tom adds that previous years have included Gerald Wysocki, Scott Yeaw, Dick Sonner, Jim O'Hara '67, '77S (MBA), and Dick Steele '63. . . . David Myland Kaufman, professor of neurology and psychiatry at Yeshiva University's Albert Einstein College of Medicine, has published Clinical Neurology for Psychiatrists (7th Edition) (Elsevier/Saunders).

1965 Jim Mullen has published a memoir, The Abyss: A Test and Triumph of Everlasting Love (Xlibris). He writes: “This book is my chronicle of the multiple

1966 Marc Holzer, founding dean of the Rutgers-Newark School of Public Affairs and Administration, has received an award for his research. In March, the American Society for Public Administration presented him with the 2013 Dwight Waldo Career Research Award, which recognizes distinguished research in public administration over an extended period of time.

1967 Jim O'Hara '77S (MBA) (see '64).

1968 Ted Rabkin writes that he retired last September after 40 years working at IBM and at Lockheed Martin, where he was most recently a staff software test engineer. He's now taking lifelong learning courses on the Revolutionary War, the Civil War, and World War II, and performing trail maintenance and patrol on the Catoctin Trail in Maryland as part of the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club. He adds that his wife, Susan, is a staff systems engineer at Lockheed Martin; his daughter is a social worker for Montgomery County, Md.; and his son is a doctoral candidate in clinical psychology at SUNY Albany.

1969 Joan Steinman has won the American Academy of Appellate Lawyers' Eisenberg Prize for her article “Appellate Courts as First Responders: The Constitutionality and Propriety of Appellate Courts' Resolving Issues in the First Instance.” The article appeared in the April 2012 Notre Dame Law Review. Joan, who holds the title of Distinguished Professor of Law at the Illinois Institute of Technology's law school, also won the award in 2005. She's the first scholar to win two Eisenberg prizes.

1971 Anthony Boccaccio, a photographer in Spokane, Wash., has published a book of 238 images he shot over four decades, documenting the construction of Brazil's Transamazonian Highway, and the gold rush that ensued. Where Madness Follows: The Search for Gold in the Amazon Jungle (self-published) is available at www.blurb.com. . . . Thomas Gerbasi '76M (MD) was named a Castle Connolly Medical “Top Doc” for western New York in 2013. He writes: “I've practiced pediatrics in Lewiston, N.Y., since 1979. My dad, Mike Gerbasi '31, '33M (MS), '35M (MD), was also a U of R grad and a pediatrician.” Mike died in 1987.

1973 Jay Goldstein '74S (MBA) writes that Bob Fenchel, who had been his roommate at Rochester, died last December in Steamboat Springs, Colo. “Bob was a vital member of the Gilbert Basement Zoo which had its own ‘don't ask, don't tell’ policy for shenanigans in his freshman year and the founder of the intramural teams known as Stash's Place, which had success in many sports during his years at the U of R,” Jay writes. “A computer science major in the early days of the field using punch cards and Fortran language at Taylor Hall, Bob went on to UCLA, where he received his PhD. He then founded SoftCraft with his business partner, Bill Overman, which developed Fancy Font, a revolutionary application that allowed then prevalent dot-matrix printers to produce high quality output. Bob met his wife, Mary Vernon, while in graduate school in 1976, and they were married in 1980. They moved to Madison, Wis., where

1975 John Serry '91 (MM) writes that he’s put out his first self-released recording, The Shift. “The album contains all original compositions by me, as is usual for my recordings. The band is the one that I formed in London when I first came to Europe to live in 2004.” It includes Mark Mondesir on drums, Sam Burgess on upright bass, and David O’Higgins on tenor and soprano saxophones. John adds: “This is a pivotal record for me, as the title suggests.”

1979 George Work '81 (MM) (see '81).

1981 Violinist John Gilbert writes, “Gramophone magazine gave a glowing review to cellist George Work '79, '81 (MM), conductor Timothy Muffitt '95 (DMA), and me following the September 2012 release of our recording of concerti by Kurt Weill,

TRIBUTE

Margaret Bond '47: 'A Savvy Guide to All Things Editorial'

When Margaret Bond '47 retired in 2001 as University editor—at that time, the editorial voice of Rochester Review—she had, remarkably, worked at the University for more than a third of its history. And in fact, her appreciation for the University had begun even earlier.

Both of her parents were University graduates, and, well before her own undergraduate days at the College for Women on Prince Street, “I remember how I used to read the alumni magazine when it arrived at the house, with never a thought that my acquaintance with the publication would ever become rather more intimate,” she later said.

Upon graduating with distinction, she started working at the College for Women in its library, alumnae office, and registrar’s office. She then took an opening as a secretary (“what else was a female French major to do in those days if she didn’t want to teach?”) in the University’s public information office, and from 1951 to 1965 worked her way up through various editorial positions. When the Memorial Art Gallery decided to establish a public relations department, she became its head and remained so until 1979.

It was then that Margaret was offered the job of University editor and associate director of University communications, with the primary responsibility of overseeing Rochester Review. From a first-floor corner office of Wallis Hall, Margaret was a savvy guide to all things editorial.

What does a good editor do when tempers flare, writers complain that an editor has messed up the copy, destroyed the idea, ruined the punch line? In moments of quiet reflection, those same writers will grudgingly acknowledge (at least to themselves) that a skillful editor has made their writing—even what started as well-crafted prose—that much better, that much more compelling. Margaret made all of her colleagues look good. Indeed, her editorial advice was sought out by many outside of the communications office. Her sharp eye and erudition made her a ready resource for administrators across the campuses.

SHARP-EYED AND ERUDITE: Bond oversaw Rochester Review from 1979 to 2001.

Margaret, who died in March at the age of 87, had a wry wit that always helped to cast things in their proper light. Her continuing flexibility was remarkable, as she witnessed the somewhat daunting transitions from typewriter to computer, from hot type to cold type, from letter to email, from one century to the next.

Ultimately, she edited Rochester Review for 22 years and stayed long enough to preside over the 2000 sesquicentennial publication of the pictorial Beside the Genesee, written by Jan LaMartina Waxman '81N. After all, who better to mastermind such an account than the sharp-eyed editor who personally witnessed so much of that history?

—Robert Kraus '71

Kraus was director—and later, associate vice president—of public relations at Rochester, from 1984 to 2005.
