James Johnson

Professor of Political Science

Nese Yildiz

Professor of Economics

My teaching and research concern econometrics. I use statistical/mathematical tools to create methods that are designed to help applied/empirical economists. I joined the University of Rochester in 2007. The reason I would like to join this committee is because I deeply care about the research environment in the University, and I would like this environment to continue to be one in which community members feel safe to express their ideas.
