The University of Rochester is committed to the expression and discussion of a wide variety of ideas and opinions and encourages members of the University community to be active and engaged citizens. This guidance should not discourage members of the University of Rochester community from communicating with their elected representatives or engaging in political discourse as private citizens, or on behalf of groups or organizations to which they belong.

However, when activities are undertaken in a personal capacity, it is the responsibility of the University community member involved to state expressly that the activity is conducted in a personal capacity and not in his or her capacity as a representative of the University of Rochester.

The Office of Government and Community Relations is the University's designated point-of-contact for federal, state, and local lobbying and must be contacted and informed of any planned activities that could be interpreted as lobbying by faculty, staff, and/or students prior to taking any action on behalf of the University. With the exception of specifically authorized employees, University faculty, staff, and other members of the University of Rochester community are not permitted to lobby on behalf of the University.
