1956 Bill Powell '60M (MD), a retired obstetrician, has written a novel, From There to Here: Anatomy of a Divorce (Strategic Book Publishing). The book follows the fictional Peter Wyse from his childhood in the 1930s to his courtship, marriage, and many years later, divorce from his true love, Sarah.

1958 Orren Van Orden sends a photo and an update. He writes: "This past summer, my wife, Dorothy, and I attended the 50th wedding anniversary celebration of my Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity brother Tom Currie '59 and Sally Jenkins Currie '60. Classmates Warner '59 and Patti O'Day Blow '60 and Sandra Nielsen Wanner '60 also honored Tom and Sally with their presence. It was the first time I had seen Tom and Sally since their wedding in Webster, N.Y., in 1961. They look just as vibrant as they did then, with the exception that Sally's hair isn't red now! We pray that their next 50 years will be just as happy as the last 50 have been." From left to right are Sally, Dorothy, Orren, and Tom.

1959 Warner Blow (see '58)... Tom Currie (see '58)... Peter Hays writes that he's published his sixth book and his fourth on Hemingway: The Critical Reception of Hemingway's The Sun Also Rises (Camden House). Peter is a professor emeritus of English at the University of California at Davis... Mary Barstow Olson writes: "I have been reading class notes for 50 years now. I always enjoy them but was never as excited as when I read the note from Michael Ko '91 in the July–August 2011 issue. I can't promise to have read every entry through the years, but this is the first time I've seen a graduate praising his university for its continuing growth and expressing gratitude for the fact that his education at U of R led him to a satisfying and prosperous career. May his life continue the Meliora trajectory."

1964 Peter Standish reports that his Alpha Delta Phi brother John Glossop '66 passed away. He had lost touch with John and heard about John's passing, in March 2008, only recently. Peter writes: "John was a revered teacher, director, and author. He taught in Toronto high schools for over 25 years and led two professional theater companies. John cofounded the Etobicoke School of the Arts, whose student productions earned awards at the Sears Ontario Drama Festival and from the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the International Young Playwrights Festival. His book, Directing: The Art and Craft (TheatreBooks), is highly regarded in drama circles."

1966 John Glossop (see '64).

1969 Tony Cantrick won a gold medal in the amateur division of the 2011 Seattle International Piano Festival and Competition. He writes: "I enjoyed participating in the winners' recital and having the opportunity to visit with the other winners from around the world. My program consisted of works by Scarlatti, Rachmaninoff, and Debussy. Other awards I received the night of the recital were Audience Favorite and Best Performance of a Sonata by Scarlatti." His piano teacher is William Chapman Nyaho '84E (MM). In addition to studying piano and singing bass, Tony is a systems analyst for Crane Aerospace and an avid hiker and bicyclist. He lives in Woodinville, Wash., with his wife and two children... Stuart Mushlin has been named a master clinician at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston. An internist, Stuart is a member of the department of medicine at the hospital and at Harvard Medical School. The master clinician designation recognizes faculty who have distinguished themselves through patient care and mentorship.

T. Franklin Williams: A Pioneer in Geriatrics

In the early 1980s, Frank Williams, then a professor of medicine at Rochester's School of Medicine and Dentistry, began one of the first training programs for physicians to learn the new field of geriatrics, the medical field dedicated to the health care of older adults.

I was privileged to be one of his first fellows. Many of us were drawn to this new field because the established specialties of medicine taught us well how to treat diseases but often ignored how people were feeling and functioning. Under Dr. Williams's leadership, vision, and example, we learned to care for patients, and not just their illnesses.

While humble and gentle, Dr. Williams was also forceful in his convictions and expectations. He inspired us to find our own path, to never compromise on excellence, and to contribute to the improvement of the lives of those around us. He was the defining influence in my career.

Over the years, in his roles as a physician, investigator, national leader, teacher, and mentor, Dr. Williams changed the way geriatric medicine is practiced and investigated. In 1983, he became the second director of the National Institute on Aging at the National Institutes of Health. In this position, he promoted greater rigor in the investigation of the biologic changes that occur with aging and the medical, cognitive, psychological, and social problems that are faced by older adults. He enhanced the scientific credibility of geriatric and gerontological investigation.

Thanks to the research supported by the institute during his years as director, there is a better understanding of what happens as people age and what can be done to reduce the burden of chronic diseases. Millions of people have benefited from this research.

Through the years, as Dr. Williams advanced in prominence and national leadership, he never lost sight of his true life's work, the care of elderly patients and the education of medical students and young medical trainees. Dr. Williams influenced the lives and careers of several generations of clinicians and investigators. His attraction for young trainees is perhaps best evidenced by the legions of medical students who gave up their Saturday mornings over the years to spend time with Dr. Williams at his beloved Monroe Community Hospital.

Integrity is having one story—one set of beliefs, values, and priorities. True integrity is rare, particularly among individuals in positions of influence. Frank, who died in November, one day shy of his 90th birthday, was the same man, whether testifying before Congress or caring for a frail patient at Monroe Community Hospital. He had integrity. —Mary Tinetti '84M (Flw)

Gail Ingersoll: Powerful Intellect, Gentle Soul

Gail Ingersoll was one of kind. She had a powerful intellect, but a gentle soul. She was a renowned researcher and clinician, but she also loved music, art, and the written word. She understood the power of education in transforming people and ideas, and committed her life's work to serving others.

As director of clinical nursing research at Strong Memorial Hospital and the Loretta C. Ford Professor of Nursing at the School of Nursing, Gail conducted pathbreaking research in clinical nursing that led to improvements in patient care delivery and the work environment for nurses both in Rochester and across the country.

Gail died in November at the age of 62. Those of us who knew her well recognized that she could be incredibly focused and determined. She was persistent in achieving her own goals and unselfishly worked to help others accomplish theirs. Those of us who loved her witnessed these traits right up to her last moments.

Gail surrounded herself with beauty. Her home was filled with the works of local artists and artisans. Since the birth of her grandnieces, Evangeline and Aneliese, Gail included their masterpieces in her home as well, and considered these her most precious works of art.

Gail was a voracious reader. She kept a running list of the books she read, including a short summary of the plot and her personal rating of the book's overall value. If you were looking for a great book to read, you only had to ask Gail. She could list immediately five or six "must read" books that she felt would be just right for you.

Gail was a fabulous and gracious hostess and her annual Christmas party was a special event, one that we all looked forward to each year. She worked for days preparing for the event, making unique and wonderfully delicious hors d'oeuvres and desserts. Although her home was large, with plenty of room to roam, we all seemed to congregate in the kitchen or around the dining room table, enjoying the good food and conversation. At the end of the evening, Gail willingly shared any and all recipes, which often became favorites in our own households!

Gail chose to become a nurse because she believed that making a difference in someone else's life enriched her own. She found great pleasure in her role as mentor, and those of us who benefitted from her mentoring over many years have become better people as a result of her influence. We will greatly miss her insight and advice, but most of all we will miss her presence in our lives.
