Open Education Resources (OER): Continuing the Dialogue

Monday, March 2, 3:00-4:30 pm in LeChase 215

Open Education Resources (OER) has the potential to transform how we share our work and build on each other's products in the digital age, yet we are far from realizing its full potential for education.

Join us for a conversation around the following questions:

What is OER? What is its potential for education?

How can we use OER in our teaching?

How can we give public access to our work?

Our conversation will be grounded on a few presentations from experts from our University of Rochester Libraries - which will also include an interim report about a collaborative project that was introduced in one of last year LiDA Sessions.

Panelists:

Eileen Daly-Boas

Kimberly Hoffman

Moriana Garcia

Moderator:

Raffaella Borasi, Director, Center for Learning in the Digital Age, Warner School of Education University of Rochester
