

The Promises and Perils of Personalized Learning in Online Forums: Sharing Snapshots

Monday, March 27, 3:00 pm to 4:30 pm in LeChase 305

Facilitators: Laura Brophy (Assistant Dean & Executive Director of External Relations)
& Dr. Jayne Lammers (Assistant Professor, Teaching & Curriculum)

Hello, all.

In this session, Laura Brophy (Warner's Assistant Dean and Executive Director of External Relations) will draw on her own experiences to point out key features that support personalized learning in online forums. Through comparing and contrasting photography and nano reef forums, she will highlight how such spaces can encourage and/or limit self-directed learning opportunities.

Following this discussion and participants' hands-on explorations of online forums, Jayne Lammers (Assistant Professor in Teaching and Curriculum) will guide participants through an examination of the relevant learning theories that help to explain the promises and perils of personalized learning in online forums. Participants will have the opportunity to explore online forums, consider theoretical and practical implications, and make connections to their own learning in the digital age contexts.

We look forward to seeing you there!

Kind regards,

LiDA Study Group
